Feedback

I found the teleclass interesting and stimulating both personally and professionally. I'm interested in the idea of developing a course to support people in 'accessing' their wisdom more easily, more fully. I'd also like to explore further the idea that came up today about the connections between wisdom, intuition and creativity going hand in hand i.e. thinking about ways to consciously increase the way entering one can spark the others.

Re 1 on 1 coaching, I think the using the distinction between smart options and wise options will be really useful (I actually have a specific client with a specific situation that I think this might be very valuable with).

I think having a clear distinction between being smart and wise will have implications for how I work with my clients. It will be one of the filters I use when I determine what I might do with a client in a given situation.

I think if something comes of this teleclass in so far as developing a way in which to coach wisdom and it is shared with the group then it will have been in my eyes successful. I like to take what I learn for my own benefit and also to share it with other people so that they too can benefit, I don't see the point in doing a teleclasses otherwise.

This was a mind-blowing course! It has changed my entire focus as a coach! Seriously, I don't think I can ever just sit by again without questioning my clients at a deeper level, in order to explore their wisdom.

I will of course now also be asking my own coach to help me tap into and celebrate my own wisdom. That's bound to have positive implications for my clients as well.

Thank you Noel, for another brilliant course. I can definitely see why so many refer to you as a Master Coach!
